THUGS BULLET

shoulder blade in his back, and issued from the right breast, but which the doctors say will probably not be fatal, Homer Black, believed to be the thug who committed the atrocious holdup, is in the county jail. Black is alleged to have stated after being brought into the sheriff's office, that if it had not been that William Tweedy had him covered with a double-barrelled shot gun from a buggy, he would have killed W. W. Johnson, the livery stableman, who had left the buggy to effect the suspected thug's capture as he ran into hiding in the bushes about a block west of the Fair Grounds store on the Fair Grounds road. When captured Black wore a black handkerchief around his neck in such a position that it could be easily drawn up around his face. In the front of his trousers he carried a 45-calibre Colt's revolver and on other parts of his person he had nearly an entire box of shells. Two empty shells of the same calibre were found by nursewoman C. F. Lansing on an overcoat believed to belong to Black, found on the platform of the street car waiting room at the Fair Grounds.

Doctor Robertson passed a good right and it is stated by the doctors who attended him the wound will probably not prove as serious as was at first expected. Should no complications set in the physician should be well in a comparatively short time.

An important feature in connection with Black is that he was seen in this city yesterday with another man. It is the belief of the police that the two worked in conjunction in several mis-deeds recorded in this city and especially in the beating up of Clerk Giles of Barnes' Cash Store. From Black's position of hiding by the side of the Fair Grounds road, he looked to the two men who effected his capture, as if he were prepared to hold up a car, as he had his mask already to pull over his face and a pistol in his hand at a spot where all cars have to come almost to a stop before rounding the curve near the place.

The Holdup.
Dr. Robertson, being afoot and carrying an umbrella, was walking down Fourteenth street. He observed a man also carrying an umbrella in front of him some distance away, and while watching the latter saw him bring his umbrella down in front of him. When quite close to the stranger the umbrella was again raised the man pointing a pistol directly at the doctor. The man then ordered the doctor to throw up his hands. Dr. Robertson then made an attempt to escape but as he began running away the man fired striking the physician in the back just below the right shoulder blade and passing completely through the body. The bullet came out of the right breast. The highwayman then fired another shot, which fortunately missed its mark.

Men came rushing up from every direction after hearing the two shots. Among the first to respond were J. H. Schell, Frank E. Shafer, D. W. Shafer, W. N. Savage and Judge King. These gentlemen quickly removed the injured man to the home of Frank Shafer at the corner of Thirteenth and State street where he was made as comfortable as possible, awaiting the arrival of a physician and the ambulance which came a very few minutes after. He was removed to the Willamette Sanitarium.

Results of the Drag-net.

One of the best pieces of work ever done in this city was accomplished in this case by the officers and their assistants. Immediately after the shooting, the sheriff and chief of police were notified, and within a few minutes they were on the scene ready for business. Sheriff Minto, after obtaining the particulars returned to his office and proceeded to get in touch with some of the best men in the city, whom he gave instructions to locate at different points where the highwayman would be most likely to make his escape. After doing this the sheriff and chief of police Gibbon accompanied by the chief's force went directly to the Southern Pacific depot, where they made a diligent search of the premises and the passing trains. At 9 o'clock the sheriff's drag net was put in motion; and at 9:30 o'clock the man upon whom the strongest suspicion and evidence of crime is placed, was handcuffed sitting in the sheriff's office.

Johnson and Tweedy Captors.
W. Johnson, the well-known livery man, and William Tweedy were deputized and instructed by the sheriff to station themselves at Brooks and keep a lookout for the fugitive, and they proceeded to carry out the orders promptly. The two

OREGON ELECTRIC RECOGNIZES SALEM AS EDUCATIONAL CENTER

MANAGERS WILL ENCOURAGE ERECTION OF PRODUCE WAREHOUSES ALL ALONG THE LINE.

The Oregon Electric recognizes that Salem is the greatest educational center of the Willamette valley. Here are all kinds of institutions of higher education, a university, a business college, a Catholic academy, a normal school, and a $70,000 high school, a free people's college. One of the next moves of the Oregon Electric to capture business and develop Salem as an education center is to put on a school rate for students on a very low commutation basis. This rate will extend to points between Salem and Portland, and will enable many to attend school at Salem. The Oregon Electric is also looking out inducements to get ready to build produce warehouses on the line between Salem and Portland. They will meet such parties at houses at every point where there are cars to enable them to build up freight business.

man-hunters left the city in a r.g. and were driving down the Fair Grounds road and had arrived within a few blocks of the Fair Ground store when Walter Johnson faintly observed the form of a man crouched behind a large tree near the road. "Wait a minute, the neck yoke is coming down," said Johnson to Tweedy, and he got out of the buggy and went around to the horses' heads, from which place he walked toward the bushes at the side of the road with two revolvers grasped in his hands in readiness. Johnson demanded the man in the bushes to come out and throw up his hands. Tweedy was standing up in the buggy with a double-barrelled shot gun pointed directly at Black, thus, as afterwards learned, probably saving Johnson's life, as Black would have shot to kill had Johnson been alone.

The fellow responded to Johnson's order with alacrity, and Johnson searched him finding a big 45 Colt's revolver stuck in the front of his trousers apparently put there when he was told to throw up his hands. After ascertaining that no other weapons were on the prisoner, Johnson marched him to the rig, made him get in and brought him to the sheriff's office. The sheriff was notified of the capture shortly after while still at the depot, and returned to his office to find the man securely handcuffed. Sheriff Minto then investigated every part of the man's clothing, making him strip to the skin. The investigation resulted in the bringing to light nearly a whole box of Winchester 45-calibre shells, and a small tobacco sack full of 32-calibre automatic shells, two hats, one white one perfectly dry, and a black one soaked with water. Nothing more of importance was found on his person, and the sheriff placed him under lock and key.

The sheriff put a question to him directly concerning the attempted holdup, but the only answer he got, was, "I have nothing to say." Upon a close inspection of the gun it was discovered that it had been fired recently, although no shells were missing from the chamber. The smokeless powder grains were in evidence in the barrel, also a strong smell of freshly burned powder. Description of the Man. The prisoner gave his name as Black. His build is somewhat slender, but well formed, his face smooth shaven and he has a pair of cool, dark, piercing eyes. While going through the sheriff's inspection, he was apparently unconcerned, and kept his eyes down to the floor with the exception of a few lightning glances to those around him. He carried a bottle of whiskey which he "killed" in the sheriff's office. Johnson and Tweedy Congratulated. Sheriff Minto gave Johnson and Tweedy his sincere congratulations on their good work done in taking the man into custody, as their bravery was certainly commendable. Sheriff Minto questioned Black last night regarding the deed, and notwithstanding he gave out information of importance, he was slip of the tongue, apparently, draws the net closer around him. "Do you know what you are arrested for?" asked Sheriff Minto. "No," said Black. "You are arrested for shooting Robertson up on Fourteenth street," the sheriff told him. "What do you say for yourself?" In response Black said he had nothing to say. "Were you alone when you did this?" asked Sheriff Minto. Black replied "Yes," afterwards denied that he did so. Black's demeanor this morning showed nervousness, and while Sheriff Minto conversed with him, he was compelled to bring all his powers to bear in order to maintain a stolid and indifferent appearance. Warden Curtice of the penitentiary made a close inspection of Black at the county jail this morning, but he could not identify him. An umbrella which was in his possession was found today in a place in Yew Park, near the Woolen Mills. An accurate description of the umbrella is published below and should be identified by any one in the city, from whom it was undoubtedly stolen. It can be had by calling the court house: Ladies light umbrellas, long hardwood handles straight. A few stitches take the piece of light leather near the lower catch. The trade mark of Meyers & Sons in the inside of the top. Two black tassels on handle. It was discovered by the officers this morning that Black was in the city yesterday in company with another man. Several attempts to procure medical aid was made by the partner who was suffering from a cut in the leg, and Dr. Robertson dressed it. It is believed by the authorities that the other man is still in the town and a search is being made for him.
